The next step was to send for the captive and marry her to the equerry, bestowing a sum of money on the happy pair that would have kept them in comfort ever after; but, independently of the countess, they became rich, for the young woman taught her art to seven daughters, from whom descended all the Bruges lace-makers. This is a sweet romance, but from whom did this pious Serena receive the threads with which she imitated the heavenly cobwebs? It has been suggested she unraveled her stockings, and, again, that she plucked the golden hairs from her head, but why will folks be so dreadfully practical? It is sufficient that the hand-made lace of Flanders is the most exquisite thing wrought by human fingers, and the fatal looms have almost destroyed its art with their new industry. It was the elegant Marie Antoinette who gave the first blow to lace making. The splendid lace worn in profusion at the courts of Louis XIV. and XV. was replaced by the gauzes and muslins of the queen, and though Empress Josephine brought back the fashion, it has never been the same as then. The looms have produced perfect, too perfect, imitations and cheapened the marvelous labor of years. It is now proposed by the Belgian queen and some other sovereign ladies to make a point of wearing only hand-made lace, and binding themselves by solemn compact not to allow an inch of machine-made lace on their petticoats and under linen. We shall see what effect this will have on the modern mondaine and how her bills

Varicolored Rodents Have Been Taken Up by English Society Women.

According to high London authority, it is now strictly correct for society women to lavish their affection on the little animal which is generally supposed to be the terror of the female sex. The society mouse has many pleasing shades, from white, pure as snow, to glossy balck, gleaming like "What would you do?" asked Porkby, | coal. At the meeting of the Medway Fanciers' association, held in the ancient city of Rochester, recently, this new pet reached his highest popularity and met with universal admiration. There were 117 of the pretty little creatures on exhibition, and the CALVES-Fair to good light 6 25 favorite and chief prize winner, pure white all over, excepting his eyes, which were two little beads of brilliant black, was the property of Mrs. George Atlee of Royston, Herts. Exhibitors come from Scotland, Ireland, Wales and all parts of England. The colors of the pretty little animals-the mouse can no longer be classified as vermin--were black, fawn, chocolate, white, cream, Dutchmarked, variegated, tortoise and white, tricolor, sable, golden agouti, silver gray, black and tan, and blue. In form, appearance and manners they resembled a collection of diminutive fancy tame rabbits. One of the originators of the British National Mouse club was Miss Cockburn Dickenson, the "missing heiress," whose mysterious disappearance was a nine days' sensation for the papers a year or so back. The whereabouts of Miss Dickenson was never traced, and the club has preserved, stuffed in a glass case, her mouse, "Champion Queenie," with which the was the first winner of the elub championship cup. - Chicago Chronicle.

could imitate the lovely patterns of Fish Are Killed by the Simple Firing of a Rifle Bullet Into the Water.

In England, where the game and fish aws are much more strictly observed than in this country, the "poacher" on forbidden waters, who is too anxious to line, will drep a dynamite cartridge into a river hole and after exploding it will scoop up a bagful of fish, which have floated to the surface from the concussion. An Italian officer, Maj. Michelini, who has been investigating the qualities of bullet and rifles, has discovered that fish can be killed more easily than even by the dynamite cartridge. The Italian rifle, which is but .256 inch in diameter, proved very deficient in stopping power at the battle of Adowa. Nevertheless at short ranges the very high velocity of the bullet gives rise to a powerful explosive effect. Maj. Michelini one day fired one Oil-cured. No sling. of these guns into the water at an angle of about 45 degrees. A dead fish almost immediately rose to the surface. On examination no wound was discoverable in the body, the death being due entirely to the hydraulic shock arising from the impact of the bullet with the water. This view was amply confirmed by further experiments, and many fish were killed by the blow of the bullet on the water exactly as if by an explosion of a dynamite shell. The effects of the hydraulic shocks seemed to be sufficient to kill all fish within two feet to two feet six inches of the point of the impact.
